The following affecting narrative of a distressing shipwreck in the bay of Calais, copied from the Paris Moniteur, is rendered the more interesting by the generous warmth with which the French editor records the heroic exertions of the English sailors to relieve his suffering countrymen.

CALAIS, April 17.

Yesterday the wind blowing from N.N.E. with extreme violence, had rendered the sea frightful, and all approach to the coast dangerous, when about 11 o'clock A.M. the time of high water, there was seen a small French vessel (which is since known to be the Leonora, from L'Orient of 72 tons, with seven men, bound from Nantes to Dunkirk, with a cargo of grain,) beating up painfully against the fury of the waves. The captain, Huard, thinking, no doubt, that it would be safer to attempt entering the port of Calais than lying out at sea, determined on the former: and, although he had neither a pilot on board, nor any personal knowledge of the coast, he hazarded an effort to carry it into execution; but, overpowered by the force of the winds, the currents, and the waves, he was driven on the works to the east of the port, where she struck. The danger soon became imminent, and the wreck thrown on shore announced the certain death of the seven unfortunate mariners. Numerous witnesses of this scene of desolation lamented that they could offer no assistance. At this moment there was seen advancing with force of oars, a pinnace-boat sent from the British yacht called the Royal Sovereign, which had carried to this port the Duke of Orleans some days ago. This boat, commanded by Lieutenant Charles Moore, who had under him eight sailors from the crew of the yacht, advanced with intrepidity in spite of the dangers by which it was surrounded. Captain Owen, the commander of the yacht, displaying a zeal worthy of the greatest praise, stood upon the extremity of the pier, and cheered by his gestures and his voice the brave and intrepid Lieutenant and his eight sailors, and although he was incessantly covered with the waves that dashed against the pier, he perseveringly maintained his painful and dangerous position for the purpose of pointing out, together with Mr. Sagot, the port captain, and some other French officers, the measures proper to be adopted, and of adding, if possible, to the necessary means of assistance.

"Up to this time the danger had been increasing on board the wrecked vessel, and already had several men lost their lives, when three were seen still to survive, & implore assistance. Meanwhile the generous and intrepid Lieutenant Moore, with his eight seamen, neglected no effort. At last they reached within a little distance of the wreck, and by means of a rope which they threw out to the vessel, saved two of these unfortunate men. Not being able longer to keep their position, the boat returned to the pier to land these two, when Captain Wilkinson, the master of the English packet the Dart, of Dover, generously threw himself into the boat, at the hazard of his life, to assist in this manoeuvre. There remained still on the wreck, another survivor, who had bound himself to the mast, with a rope, that he might not be washed overboard. The desire of crowning this fine action by rescuing another victim from the waves, inspired success into the courageous lieut. and his crew. They returned anew to face a danger, the force of which they had already measured, and had nearly reached the boat, the gallant Lieutenant standing up and directing the rowers, when a wave, more impetuous than the rest, broke over the pinnace, overthrew and precipitated into the waters this generous officer, who instantly disappeared. A feeling of consternation struck with terror and regret the numerous spectators of the scene. The Lieutenant, however, after having passed under his boat, recovered himself, and rose to the surface, where he was immediately taken up by his sailors, and replaced in the boat. The courage of this generous man was not slackened by the threatened death which he had so miraculously escaped; he lost not the presence of mind that belongs to true intrepidity, and he returned with heroic perseverance towards the perishing individual for whose safety he hazarded his own The difficulties of the situation increased; the French sailor, too much weakened, had lost courage, but seeing the boat return to his assistance, he unbound himself, and, endeavouring to make an effort for his own salvation, he precipitated himself into the sea, where he was seen to float for an instant, and then to sink for ever. All assistance had now become useless; the English boat now returned to port, where the generous men who had given so noble an example of their rare intrepidity received the testimonies of that satisfaction with which every spectator was so deeply penetrated.

"Yesterday evening, on the ebbing of the tide, the wrecked vessel was left on the dry sand, and a part of the corn was got out; the greatest part of the cargo, however, will be lost,"

FROM INDIA.

"By recent accounts from India we are informed that a considerable movement pervades the native Powers throughout the north-east and centre of the Peninsula.—The tributaries and officers of the Rajah of Jypour, terrified by the advances of Ameer Khan, and still more by the imbecility of their own Rajah resolved at one time to call in the assistance of the Company's troops—at another to choose a more capable and efficient Sovereign. The British Resident at Delhi had received intelligence that a number of Pindarrees in the field amounted to no less than 80,000, mostly well equipped, and all well mounted. Their mode of making war is most destructive, as plunder is their only object: they separate for the purpose into bodies of from 100 to 4 or 5000 horse, and ravage a territory of 50 miles or more in circumference; whence after rendering it a perfect desert they march elsewhere to similar devastations. It was a detachment of several thousand of these fierce mauraders which traversed last year the whole of India: and penetrating to the Bay of Bengal, laid waste the British Province of Cattack, its the very neighborhood of Calcutta. It is presumed that some decisive measures will be taken by the Company's Government, and their several allies to check the progress of this terrible banditti, and to chastise their insolence since otherwise, there will be neither security nor tranquility for the peaceful inhabitants from north to south of India. For this purpose His Highness the Nizam had resolved to embody 5000 cavalry & place them under the command of British officers. To this end also it was conjectured as much as with any view towards anticidating the designs of the Mahrattas, a subsidary force of 6 battalions of Company's infantry, five regiments of horse and a proportionate number of artillery, were forthwith to assemble at Nagpour, in the Dominions of the Rajah of Berar, under the command of colonel John Adams; and colonel Frith had been appointed to the second division of the army in the field."

London paper.

FROM THE SPANISH MAIN.

A letter from the Island of Trinidad, dated May 11th, to a respectable house in this city, describes the success of the Patriots as follows.

The troops which had recently arrived with Morilla, from Genada (Old Spain) passed the Oronoko and formed a junction with the royal troops in that quarter, amounting in all to two thousand, whence they marched to attack the patriotic General Piar. On coming up with him, Piar feigned a retreat, and induced his adversaries to pursue him to a position he had fixed upon, when he halted, and a desperate battle ensued. Eight hundred of the royal troops were left dead on the field, and many taken prisoners. Morilla escaped, and at the last accounts was at Caraccas. Only 250 of his troops had reached Guayna. Bolivar, the supreme chief of the republican army, had recently been at Guayana, where he had an interview with Piar, after which he recrossed the Oronoco, taking with him 2000 horses. All the country from Apure to Barcelona and Cumana, (the two last mentioned cities excepted) is in favour of the patriot cause. Paez is at Varinas. It is expected he will soon attack and take possession of Calabozo, there being no force at that place to oppose him. A detachment of Marino's army is besieging Cumana: the residue are before Barcelona. Every thing goes on well, and it will not be long before the independence of the country is completely established.——Com. Adv.

The navy of Emperor Petion, consists of the General Brown, carrying 40 guns and 400 men; the Wilberforce, formerly the General Gates, 22 guns; Fire Fly of 18; and the Conqueror of 16—all lying at Port au Prince on the 21st of last month. Petion was popular, and entertained an exalted opinion of our administration. The laws of Petion were all considered just.—He patronizes education—the country was well supplied with schools filled with scholars. Foreign missionaries are received and treated with urbanity. Petion regretted the circumstance of shooting an American sailor who had killed one of his subjects—the proofs, however, were so clear, that his life could not be spared consistent with the laws of his empire. Petion also hoped the Americans do not countenance Carthagenian privateersmen. Corn of a peculiar sweetness, and all kinds of vegetables are raised in St. Domingo in great abundance. Strawberries, peaches and grapes also grow to great perfection, and rapid progress was making in the cultivation of the sugar cane.

From the Belfast Chronicle, April 19.

A BOTTLE CONJURER.—The hoax once practised on the public in London, by a man who advertised that he could get into a quart bottle, is now as nearly verified as human art can go. An apparent miracle is now the subject of general conversation at Dublin; and of considerable attraction at the Theatre in that city; a mechanist has found the means so to deceive the sense of seeing, that a living Harlequin takes a leap and seems to alight on a quart bottle placed in front of the stage, when after some few moments of effort, he is seen gradually to compress himself to the size of the neck, as each part enters it, and at last totally disappears in this narrow limit.—The mechanist, it is said, bids fair to make a fortune by exhibiting his apparatus in the various Theatres.

The Royal Canal of China, which is eight hundred and twenty-five miles in length, fifty feet wide, and a fathom and a half deep, was completed in forty-three years: and the famous Languedoc canal in France, connecting the ocean with the Mediterranean, which was projected by Francis I, but begun and finished under Lewis XIV, was commenced in 1656, and finished in 1681—a period of but 15 years.

FIRE.—A stable belonging to Mr. Ormsby, situated in Chancery lane, was destroyed by fire on Wednesday night last. The fire is supposed to have been communicated by some vile incendiary, as the stable had not been opened for several days— It is with pleasure that we embrace the opportunity of bearing honourable testimony of the promptitude, and activity of our fire companies. The situation of the building, which was consumed, was such as to excite a considerable deal of alarm, it being entirely surrounded by old frame houses; but by the active exertions of the firemen, no other house was injured than the one in which the fire originated.

We have been assiduously endeavouring to learn whether Day Francis the Great has lately visited Mr. Heister, for without some such agency we cannot discover how he has been so suddenly changed from a vile democrat, to an amiable fine old gentleman. Yet he certainly seems to have put off the old man and put on the new man. Alston's view of dead men raised, does not present a more surprizing picture than the resuscitation in Mr. H. of qualities he never possessed.

"There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
Than are dreamt of——."

Extract of a letter from the Commandant of Fort Charlotte, Mobile, to a gentleman in Baltimore, dated, May 1, 1817.

"The Spanish commandant at Pensacola has refused to suffer our transports with provisions for the United States troops, stationed upon the Conawa and Escambia, to pass up the bay, without paying an enormous duty—and has actually seized the rations which were designed for their support. General Gaines told me he should consider this as a direct infringement of the treaty and an act of hostility, and had reported it accordingly to our government. I have but little doubt the general will force the pass, unless he receives orders to the contrary."

We have received intelligence from Petion. One of our countrymen who has been on board of a privateer under the flag of Buenos Ayres, writes to his correspondent in this city, that after a cruize of [illegible] months they had been very successful in their captures, which were sent into Port-au-Prince for condemnation. He further states, that the privateer afterwards went into the same port, with all the hands on board in high spirits, in anticipation of the prize money that would fall to their share: this, according to their calculation, would amount to the sum of nine hundred dollars per man. They entered the port full of these joyous anticipations, changed their apparel to make as respectable an appearence as possible, furled up their sails, and were preparing peaceably to go on shore. He states farther, that while himself and his comrades were enjoying these golden dreams, the vessel was boarded and taken possession of by the blacks, who plundered them of all their wearing apparel, took their watches from their fobs, the money from their pockets, and finally committed them to prison on a charge of piracy. They were finally suffered to regain their liberty, but were sent on shore without any means of obtaining subsistence. In their distress they applied to the American consul, who administere[illegible] relief from his own private funds. He further adds, that the consul took down his flag, declaring that he would no longer act as an American agent under so tyrannical a government, and that he shortly afterwards embarked for the United States, to represent the wrongs they had suffered to the American government. He states that all the prizes which they have sent in, to the amount of at least twenty-five thousand dollars, have been confiscated, and that the privateer itself is already condemned and sold as a vessel that has been employed in committing acts of piracy, instead of making captures. He further states that admiral Taylor was off the mouth of the harbor with his squadron, and had given notice to president Petion, that he would capture every vessel under his colors, until he had obtained two millions of dollars—that being the amount of the property captured and sent in by the admiral, and which has been confiscated and condemned on the charge of piracy. He further states, that the navy of the ebony president consists of one frigate, two brigs, and a sloop of war, which it is deemed imprudent to send out. They look magnificent while riding in port, and possess a character truly grand and imposing. This property is too valuable to trust to the sea, for there it would stand a chance of being captured. We should recommend to his sable excellency to have his navy insured, and he could then, in case of a total or of a partial loss, come upon the underwriters for damages.—P. Repub.

A Sorry Predicament.—We observe in the Monongalia Spectator, printed at Morgantown Virginia, a notice of an intended application to have the county of Monongalia set off from the state, and "attached to Pennsylvania, or some other contiguous state, where the laws are equally and equitably dispensed." As a reason for the separation, it is urged, that "Western Virginia is ruled with a rod of iron; and unless, say they, we can obtain a change in some manner, our castigation will be so severe that we shall not be able to bear it." We are treated, they continue, "as a deserted step child, instead of the legitimate offspring of Virginia." The notice also states, that if affairs go on as they have done, until August, they will have no sheriff, coroner, court—and be without Law, and with but very little Gospel!!

Extract of a letter from an English gentleman at Gibraltar, to his friend in N. York, dated November last.

"The American squadron have been here some time, and I am happy to inform you, that General Don has paid the greatest attention to Commodore Chauncey, & his officers, which has been reciprocated by them. A few days since, some officers of distinction belonging to our garrison, with Judge Larpent. Lord and Lady Nugent, were accompanied on board the Washington 74, by Mrs. Henry, the American Consul's lady, and Mr. J. Waln, of Philadelphia; they remained some time on board, and partook of a cold collation —after leaving the ship, a salute was fired. I understand, very high encomiums have been passed (and deservedly) upon the elegant appearance of the Washington, & the superior discipline of her crew.

"Commodore Chauncey gave a dinner to the Dutch Admiral Van Copellen, and his captains, the captains of the American squadron, Lord Nugent, Mr. Henry, the American Consul, and Mr. J. Waln, of Philadelphia."

From the Boston Daily Advertiser, June 7.

By a gentleman who arrived at Holme's Hole and passed through town yesterday for Salem, we have received information from Pernambuco to April 17th. It represents the state of the new republic as much less prosperous than the previous accounts, and entirely contradicts the information lately received by way of Charleston, of the joining of the other provinces of Brazil in the revolution. On the contrary, the city and province of Bahia were engaged with great zeal in support of the Royal cause, and the people were volunteering to aid in the reduction of Pernambuco to their allegiance: and from Rio Janeiro, the capital of the kingdom, no information had been received. The people of Pernambuco appeared to be much less satisfied with their prospects than they had been for some weeks before. The following particulars are from the book of the Merchant's Hall Reading Room:

The new government of Pernambuco had an armed brig off port, but on the appearance of a blockading squadron from St. Salvador she retreated into port. The government was also fitting out another brig, but it was not probable they would go out.

Two ships, one of 32 and the other of 18 guns, had arrived off Pernambuco and had effectually blockaded the port. The American vessels in the port were ordered by the blockading squadron to depart in 24 hours, and the Patriot Government forbade it; but after some consideration they received passports and were at liberty to depart.

Accounts from St. Salvador represented the inhabitants as being in favor of the royal government, and that there were no symptoms of attachment to the Patriot cause; on the contrary, they were volunteering their services against the government of Pernambuco in the royal cause.—The two ships off Pernambuco were provided [illegible] volunteers. The Governor of St. Salvador had been very active and had taken measures to prevent all alarm as to the inhabitants having any inclination to follow the example of those of Pernambuco.

The troops had been allowed double pay and rations. A small place which had revolted at the southward of Pernambuco, had been subdued by the Royalists, and the Patriots were about sending a force against it when the blockading squadron appeared off the harbor, but were prevented. Great exertions were making to repel the royalists in case they should make an attack upon the place. Many of the inhabitants were dissatisfied with their situation and seemed desirous to return to the former government. All the money in the Treasury had been removed to the outskirts of the town where the troops (about 6080) were encamped. The inhabitants were in great confusion when the American vessels left the port.

To judge from the annunciations in the newspapers, of mischiefs to the agriculturist, one might suppose the contents of Pandora's box had been showered on the farms, and blasted all their labors. The fact is, we incline to believe that the prospects of the present year differ little, on the average from those of other years: the more minute attention shewn to the progress of the crops arising principally from the felicitous absence of more interesting political topics, though doubtless in a degree from the fear of a repetition of the reduced crops afforded by the cold season of last year. Though the Hessian Fly has, we know, severely affected the grain in some districts of our country, we have no doubt the earth will, on the whole, yield bounteously at the present season. Content is always silent, complaint always loud,—however, we can hear, mingled with them, the joyful sound of congratulations on the prospects of an abundant harvest.

NAPOLEON.

Captain Orman, of the ship Pacific, arrived at Philadelphia from Canton, says, that on the 7th ult. he spoke the brig Sally, Capt. Arthur, of New Bedford, from a whaling voyage, who informed him that he left Ascension seven days before, where he was told by the British officers that Napoleon was well at St. Helena 17th April, but much dissatisfied; two of his officers had recently been sent to the Cape of Good Hope, in consequence of an attempt to correspond with persons in Europe; one letter had been intercepted, but it being written in cypher the contents could not be ascertained.

IMPORTANT.—A letter from a Spanish gentleman, a zealous royalist, at Vera Cruz, to his brother in New-York, represents the contest as materially affected by the state of relations between Spain and the United States. The patriots had Mr. Onis's correspondence with the department of state printed, in order to show that a rupture must inevitably take place between the United States and Old Spain —both parties consider this highly probable. The effort is to give confidence to one party and depress the other; indeed, it appears to both that the minister favors the revolution by this means, without compromiting his character, and probably according to instructions from Madrid: be that as it may, this gentleman says, "it will be fatal to the royal cause."—Anon.

A VALUABLE PRESENT.

Arrived here yesterday, in the brig Margaretta, Captain Gardner, from London, six beautiful young Cows and one Bull of the Devonshire breed, together with some improved implements in husbandry, for Mr. Patterson and Mr. Caton, of this place, the whole being a present from the celebrated Mr. Coke, Member of Parliament for Norfolk, the richest and most practical farmer in England, who gives the following description of these cattle:

"I venture to give it as my opinion, that we have no cattle to be compared to them in the United Kingdom, for purity of blood, aptitude to feed, for hardiness, as well as for the richness of their milk, and for work when required, as I have found by a variety of experiments upon my own farm and elsewhere.

"That they may answer in America as well as they are now universally acknowledged to do in England, I most cordially hope; and my wishes will then be gratified.

To Owners of Horses.

A NUMBER of the merchants of Philadelphia, desirous of promoting the internal intercourse of the state, and of facilitating their trade and connection with the western states, have united themselves into an association, under the name of "The Philadelphia and Pittsburgh Transporting Company." Their object is to reduce and equalize throughout the year, the cost of carriage, and to diminish the time now required, for the transport of merchandize to the western waters. They therefore purpose to establish Lines of Wagons, to start daily from Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, to run day and night changing horses every ten miles.

It must be evident to every enlightened person, that the success of the proposed system is most intimately connected with the interests of the whole community. It is important for the interiour of our state, that the trade of the western country should be maintained with the Atlantick cities; to secure which, the plan now contemplated, it is believed, will be effectual. A reduction in the rates, and in the time required for the transportation of Goods, to and from the Atlantick cities to the western waters, will enable the farmers and others to transmit their products to market with facility and cheapness, and procure a supply of foreign articles on more favourable terms. It will also increase the demand for horses, travelling, the value of lands, and in fine, add much to the improvement and importance of the towns and country on the route. Owners of horses, will find constant and profitable employment for them near their homes, which is surely preferable to uncertain employment at a distance.

PROPOSALS WILL BE RECEIVED,

For hauling the Wagons any number of sections of ten miles, each section, going and returning, to be performed within every twenty hours, and persons desirous of contracting will state the section or sections they will contract for.

The loading as far as Carlisle, will not exceed 4000 lbs. and from thence to Pittsburgh 3500, or 3200 when the roads are in a bad state.

The following conditions will be required.

1. Each contractor must give satisfactory security for the faithful performance of his contract.
2. Each contract must be for one year.
3. The contractor to be at every expense for his horses and driver, including the harness.
4. The Wagons must travel two miles an hour, changing horses every ten miles without any unnecessary delay.
5. The contractors will be accountab[illegible] the Company, for all delays or damages whic[illegible]may arise from fraud or mismanagement upon the road, embraced within their contract.

Turnpike and Bridge Tolls will be paid by the Company.

Application to be made by Letter as ea[illegible]y as possible, directed to the Subscri[illegible]agent for the Philadelphia and Pittsbu[illegible]sporting Company in Philadelphia.

AGENT for the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh Transporting Company.
